

Rare Play

My first topic of the 2017 Piffle Season will be about the rarest play in the NFL. It is so rare in fact, that it has never happened in NFL history (It has happened at least twice in US College Ball). But the rule is in the books and it will eventually happen. What am I talking about? It is the one point safety. What, you say, never heard of it! Well, let me explain. When a team goes for extra point(s) after a touchdown, misses the convert on a one point conversion or the pass is intercepted on a two point conversion and the defensive team attempts to run the ball out of the end zone, crosses the goal line but then gets pushed back into the end zone and tackled, it is a one point safety. Now, when the play happens, you will be an expert amongst all the confusion of announcers, players and fans. You will be able to say the referee is making the correct call. What if the defensive team does return a conversion to the opposition's end zone? It will be a two point safety for the defensive team. Small note: I see the Dallas Cowboys are now rated as the world's most valuable sports team at 4.8 Billion dollars!
