

You Know Nothing

One of the better known quotes from the TV series GAME OF THRONES is: "You know nothing, Jon Snow". Apparently, we have a lot of Jon Snow's in our Pickers Football League, myself included. Just when you think you have the teams figured out, along comes week 6. Favorites losing their home games everywhere. The Rhino and I started this league in 1984 and I don't recall ever losing my top 3 picks (it may have happened, I just don't recall it). I am thinking I am having a terrible week, which I was, but when I look at the week's standings and, believe or not, I am in the middle of the pack. At least half the franchises are worse than me. The only one that seems to have a bead on NFL teams is the Sarge, he is the only one yet to lose his number pick. Now that I have drawn attention to him, his turn is coming. Week 7 will be the turn around week for the rest of us. Geez Rhino, we are in our 34th season, this league has lasted longer than most marriages, where did the time go?